DONAHEY INAUGURATED THIRD TIME

GOVERNOR TELLS OF CITIZENSHIP WHEN SWORN INTO OFFICE

School Children Listen
To Address Over
Radio

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 10.—“The service you get from your public officials will be in proportion to the interest you yourselves take in the affairs of government.”

These words were voiced here today by Governor Vic Donahey during his inaugural address marking his induction into his third consecutive term as chief executive of the Buckeye State.

“There is a responsibility of citizenship, as well as the privilege of citizenship, asserted the governor, addressing the ‘people of Ohio.’

“It behooves all to do their individual best in serving one another, being tolerant of the views and rights of others, in obeying the law because it is the law, rather than yielding an unwilling obedience through fear of punishment for violating,” said Donahey. The governor voiced the hope that the measure of his service as governor “shall be equal to the confidence that has been placed in me by the citizenry of our state.”

Addressing his remarks to the thousands of school children throughout the state who were listening to him through radios, the governor urged that “our children be given a sound foundation in education, discipline and respect for constituted authority.”

“Our statesmen will always be as good, or as bad, as our boys and girls,” Donahey said. “By reason of the use of the radio in broadcasting the ceremony to which you have just listened, the inaugural address today is the largest in the history of Ohio,” continued the governor. “A few years ago only a few hundred, or at the highest, a few thousand, were enabled to hear the voices of participants on such occasions.”

“We consider the radio now, the super-marvel of our electrical development, but it is entirely possible, that, in the not distant future, such ceremonies as this will not only be heard, but, also, witnessed through electrical reproduction, throughout the wide expanse of a state like Ohio,” said the governor.

“The children who are listening to my remarks at this moment will carry the progress of the twentieth century to heights unknown. I am glad the schools of Ohio are a part of my audience. You have heard the chief justice of the supreme court of Ohio administer the oath to me as governor for another term of two years. Several other newly elected state officials are being inaugurated today. The chief justice and other elected judges of the supreme court took the oath a week ago, as did also the members of the general assembly,” Donahey stated.

Pledge To God.

“Taking the oath (of office) is a matter,” continued the governor, “which means that the official pledges himself before God to administer the duties of his office in the right manner and in accordance with the wishes of the people as expressed in the constitution and laws. “The United States has the oldest written constitution in the world. It has endured because it met the needs of the American people at the time it was adopted and has been amended by orderly process at intervals to suit the changing demands of the times,” Donahey declared. “From the beginning of our country until the present generation, the people have exercised their right to govern themselves.

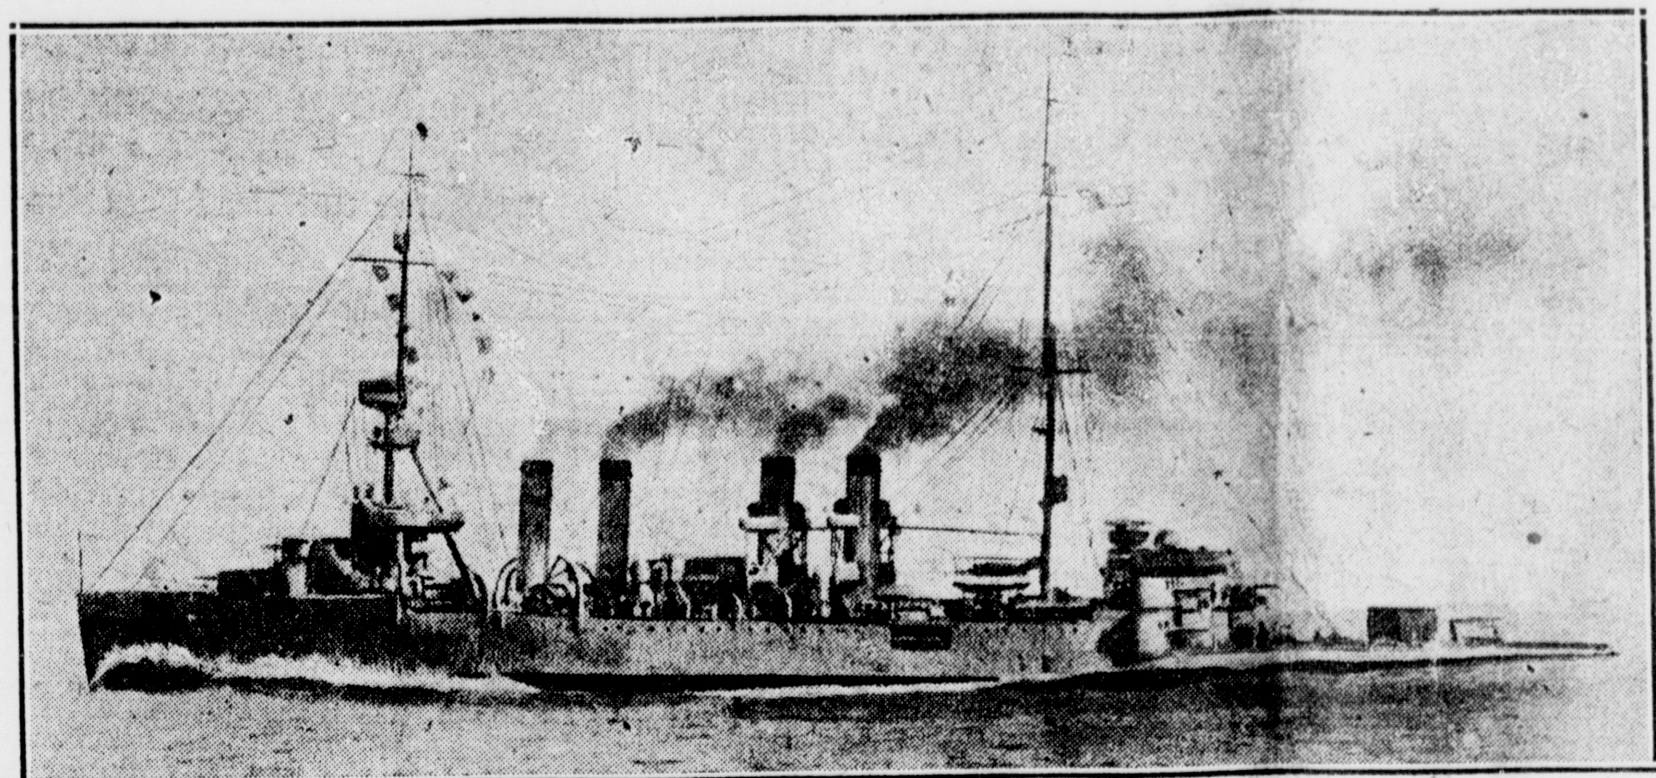

“I want to impress upon the children within my hearing that the family is the smallest unit of government,” said the governor. “When you boys and girls obey, or disobey your parents, you are obeying or disobeying your government. Everybody all through life must yield to the law.

“If you obey your father and mother and make yourselves useful and helpful to them, you are bound to become good pupils in school. If you study for a useful occupation, and choose the right kind of friends and associates, you are certain to become good citizens when you grow up to be men and women,” declared Donahey.

Word to Voters.

“Just a word to the fathers and mothers of Ohio. You are the voters who periodically select the officials who, for the time being, administer your government. If affairs are not administered right, if conditions need remedy, it is your duty to call them to the attention of the responsible officials,” the governor said. “They may be in need of the very information you are able to give.

CEDARVILLE WOMAN KILLED

COLLISION ON PIKE THROWS VICTIM OUT OF HUSBAND'S AUTO

Xenia Minister Driver Of
Auto That Strikes
Roadster

Mrs. Luella Robinson, 48, colored, Cedarville, died early Monday morning in Miami Valley Hospital from injuries received in a collision between a roadster and a sedan on the Dayton Pike near the Hawker Church ten miles west of Xenia, Sunday night at 6:30 o'clock.

The roadster in which she was riding toward Xenia, driven by her husband, William Robinson, collided almost head-on with a coupe driven by the Rev. A. J. Furstenberger, Xenia, pastor of the United Brethren Church, and also occupied by Mrs. Furstenberger, William Dudley and W. T. Whittington, also of Xenia.

The Xenia party was enroute to attend revival services at the Oak St. U. B. Church in Dayton.

Mrs. Furstenberger's left hand was cut by flying glass and Whittington also received slight scratches. The others escaped unhurt.

The Rev. Mr. Furstenberger declared he pulled to the extreme right as the second car approached weaving back and forth across the road and that his machine was forced into the ditch when Robinson's car swerved to the wrong side of the highway.

Mrs. Robinson was picked up in a ditch in an unconscious condition and taken to Miami Valley Hospital, Dayton, by a passing motorist, H. C. Oliver, 29 Tractor Ave., Dayton. Her injuries were confined to the head. She also sustained a broken nose. It was reported that she was tossed from the machine when, becoming frightened at the impending collision, she opened a door and prepared to jump for safety.

Deputy Sheriff George Sugden and Motorcycle Policeman Peter Shagin investigated the accident.

COOLIDGE TO TELL ABOUT NICARAGUA

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—President Coolidge has prepared a message to congress dealing with some phases of the Mexican-Nicaraguan situation, it was learned here today.

It was admitted at the White House that a communication has been prepared, but no information was forthcoming as to what it contains.

It was learned, however, that the document does not propose a break in relations with Mexico. Rather, it was said, the message is designed to answer some of the criticisms that have recently been voiced against the administration's policy.

Beyond admitting that the message had been prepared, White House officials were uncommunicative. Whether the message would be sent today was said to be problematical.

INDIAN ARRESTED

ZANESVILLE, O., Jan. 10.—Amy Dawson, a full blooded Choctaw Indian is being held here under indictment as an accomplice in the robbery of the general store at Philo near here. Her companions, it is charged, were a negro and a white man.

MIDNIGHT BOMB AND MACHINE GUN ATTACK COSTS FOUR LIVES

Gang Warfare Blamed For Bloodshed at Roadhouse
—Sheriffs Of Three Illinois Counties
In Search

MARION, Ill., Jan. 10.—Sheriffs of three southern Illinois counties had joined forces today in an effort to seek out those guilty in the midnight bomb and machine gun attack on “Shady Rest,” a roadhouse near here, in which three men and one woman lost their lives.

The roadhouse was located in a dense woods, 300 feet back from the highway running between Harrisburg and Marion, and was said to have been the rendezvous of the notorious Charles Birger gang, blamed for more than a score of murders in the past three years.

The roadhouse was burned to the ground and the bodies were so badly charred that positive identification was impossible. Two of the bodies were thought to be those of Steve George, a Birger henchman, and his wife.

PRISONERS ESCAPE FROM CANTON JAIL; SEARCH IS FUTILE

Ben Rudner Plays Cards
As Mates Made Getaway.

CANTON, O., Jan. 10.—Sheriff Ed Gibson today had no clues whatever to the whereabouts of five prisoners who tore out a lavatory, ripped a steel plate from the floor and made good their escape from the Stark County jail. Although he and his deputies have been scouring the haunts of the underworld ever since they have failed to find a trace of the escaped men, four of whom had been indicted for burglary and grand larceny, and the fifth was awaiting trial on an indictment charging carrying concealed deadly weapons.

The men who escaped are: Charles Pitts, indicted for carrying weapons. The other four, indicted for burglary and grand larceny, are Fred Strauss, Charles Hudson, Michael Thornton, and Thomas R. Morton.

Ben Rudner, indicted for first degree murder in the slaying of Don R. Mellett, was playing cards on the fourth floor of the jail at the time of the escape, but denies he knew anything of the plans of the quintet or that it had been executed in order that he might make his getaway.

GOVERNOR PINCHOT TAKES FINAL SLAP AT HIS OPPONENT

Refuses To Certify Vane
As Being ‘Duly Chosen’

MARRISBURG, Pa., Jan. 10.—Gifford Pinchot, who will retire from the governorship of Pennsylvania January 18, took a final slap at his political enemy William S. Vane, United States senator-elect, today when he made public a letter to the president of the senate in which he refused to certify that Vane had been “duly chosen by the qualified electors” of Pennsylvania.

The letter embodied a certificate, required by law, informing the senate of Vane's election of November 2, last. A copy of the certificate was sent to the senator-elect.

Governor Pinchot, in framing the required certification, diverted from the customary practice of governors of the commonwealth by eliminating the phrase “duly chosen by the qualified electors,” and using the words “on the face of the returns” and “appears to have been chosen.”

Pinchot and Senator Wharton Pepper, incumbent, were defeated by the Philadelphia congressman for the Republican senatorial nomination in the state primary election last May. At the general election, Vane defeated William B. Wilson, the democratic nominee, who has contested the election in the United States senate.

“I do not believe that Mr. Vane has been duly chosen,” Pinchot wrote. “On the contrary, I am convinced and have repeatedly declared, that his nomination was partly bought and partly stolen, and that frauds committed in his interest have tainted both primary and the general election.

“Therefore, I have so worded the certificate required by law that I can sign it without distorting the truth.”

WHAT NEXT SUMMER'S STYLES WILL BE LIKE

Basil Woon Bares Secrets Of Paris Couturiers; Skirts Four Inches Longer, He Says.

By BASIL WOON

Who writes “The Mirrors of Paris” for the Daily Gazette.

Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright, 1927

P. A. S. I. Jan. 10.—January and August are the two most important months for Paris dressmakers.

All winter the modelists have been busily creating the styles for next summer, and this month the first collections are being shown.

Style secrets of each house are guarded as carefully as passwords at the front. Spies, however, are everywhere—spies from fashion magazines, spies from wholesale buyers, spies from cheap manufacturers, spies from other dressmakers—though these last, to give them credit, are few.

Not a single opening has occurred as I write. Invitations to five are on my desk. So in the following paragraphs you are getting real advance news on what the fashions are to be—news, I may say, obtained only through a very long acquaintance with modelists and others connected with the principle houses.

Skirts to Be Longer.

One piece of news I rather hate to tell. Skirts are to be longer. Yes—by fully four inches. That means that to be correctly dressed this spring and summer your skirt must reach to about seven inches below the knees.

Officially, this lengthening of skirts—agreed to with somewhat suspicious unanimity by all the dressmakers—is the result of the Pope's appeal against knee-length gowns. But I have an idea that recent bad business has been responsible. For when skirts are lengthened it means that smart women must change their entire wardrobe.

Embroidery increased.

If anything, the sporty effect will be enhanced for day clothes. This is the dressmaker's reply to the attempt by several leading women to repopularize the tailor-made. Skirts for morning and afternoon will have a practical look about them. Leather will be used extensively in light-colored trimmings. Embroidery will be heavier and less easy to copy in cheap dresses.

Evening gowns, on the other hand, will be lighter, fuller, more fairy-like and ethereal. The most gossamer fabrics will be used. A

JUDGE LANDIS WILL DECIDE WEDNESDAY ON BASEBALL CASE

Unexpected Looked For
From Czar Of Diamond Game

CHICAGO, Jan. 10.—Judge K. M. Landis never does the expected.

For that reason there was wide comment today that the czar of baseball may surprise the sport world Wednesday when he announces his decision in the probe of the charges of “Charles ‘Swede’ Risberg, ousted White Sox player, that the Detroit Tigers threw some games to the Sox in 1917.”

Judge Landis hasn't pulled a bromide, those close to him declared, since he fined the Standard Oil Company $29,000, 000.

Should he decide that Eddie Collins, Dottie Bush, Ray Schalk and others should never play baseball again it would be only in line with past performances.

Considering the mass of testimony offered in his $20,000 investigation, the commissioner was confronted with the word of thirty odd baseball players, whose honesty has never before been questioned as against the claims of Arnold Gaudin and Risberg, two men who admitted under oath they played the game crooked.

Judge Landis' decision Wednesday may determine the final fate of Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker, ousted from baseball on the basis of a story told the commissioner by “Dutch” Leonard, former Detroit pitcher, of another alleged “brown” ball game.

Should the commissioner decide Collins and others, accused by Risberg are innocent, there may be a rehearing of Leonard's charges, it was believed.

Friends of Cobb and Speaker declared the baseball chieftain could hardly believe the story of Leonard and then place no credence in the tale of Risberg and Gaudin.

Judge Landis today gave no hint of his ideas in the matter. He refused to comment on any phase of his investigation of the charges of Risberg and the earlier traducement involving Cobb and Speaker, other than to reiterate he had no plans at present to give the two former managers another chance to clear their names.

He denied attorneys for the pair had even sought a rehearing.

BANDITS ROUTED BY CINCINNATIAN

CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 10.—At least three bandits today were convinced that Albert Holz, harness shop proprietor and former Mexican army officer, is one man from whom they should steer clear.

Holz held up by three negroes last night, jerked a gun from the leader's hands, drew his own and fired eight times as they fled. Bloodstains on the snow indicated he didn't miss. Holz recently killed one negro robber and his wife was acquitted four years ago for killing another.

DRY AGENT SENT INTO MISSOURI

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—H. H. Lane, a prohibition agent, today appointed deputy prohibition administrator for the western district of Missouri by General Lincoln C. Andrews.

A new deputy administrator for Indiana probably will be appointed some time today. E. C. Yellowley, Chicago enforcement chief, conferred with Andrews this morning concerning the appointment.

Money for the stadium will be provided through recurring sums from the abandoned city hall.

A large, public swimming pool is one of the features included in the structure.

CHILDREN CRUSHED, AND SUFFOCATED TO DEATH DURING PANIC

Exits Jammed With Youngsters As Blaze Starts In Balcony—Firemen Chop Through The Walls To Reach Victims

MONTREAL, Jan. 10.—Seventy-six persons, mostly children lay dead in the morgues of Montreal today as a result of a panic following an outbreak of fire at the Laurier Palace motion picture theatre yesterday afternoon. A hundred others were injured, many of whom may die.

Virtually all of the victims were less than sixteen years of age.

The fire did not seriously damage the building, and only a few of the victims were burned. Most of them were crushed or suffocated when, crazed by panic, they jammed the two exits from the balcony, making it impossible for any to get out of the building. Those in front of the crowd fought and struggled to be first out, while those behind pressed toward the doors. Those in the front went down, and those behind piled upon them until the little bodies lay dozens deep.

About a thousand were in the theatre when the fire broke out. Ninety per cent of them were children under sixteen.

The fire broke out during the matinee performance. The feature picture was “Sparrows,” with Mary Pickford in the lead. A comedy entitled “Get ‘Em Young,” was on the screen when the flames started in the balcony about fifty feet from the projection booth.

With the appearance of the first tongue of flame, a cry of “Fire!” sounded through the building.

Exits Blocked.
Ten minutes later the cries of the struggling, injured and dying children could be heard a full block from the theatre. The exits were so blocked by those trying to escape, and by those being trampled in and around the Cut Through Walls.

Firemen finally chopped holes through the brick walls, and entering cut away the stairs so that at least they could untangle the struggling heap of humanity. The little victims were passed from hand to hand out to the street.

The buildings in the vicinity were converted into emergency hospitals and morgues where practically all the doctors and nurses of the city administered to the injured. Priests stood by the exits and blessed the bodies as they were carried from the building, while police lines held back hundreds of frantic people who were children were in the building.

An immediate investigation of the cause of the fire was begun by the board of fire commissioners. An official hearing was scheduled to be called at ten o'clock this morning, but it was believed this would be adjourned to give the investigators time to examine the scene of the tragedy by daylight.

Owner Arrested.

Ameen Law, owner of the theatre, was arrested.

FARMER AND WIFE
MURDER, SUICIDE

CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 10.—The Hamilton County morgue today held the bodies of Emil J. Ulrich, 56, farmer of Indian Hill, near here, and his wife, Caroline, 36, and police records held a new “murder and suicide” entry.

While their two boys, Frank, 12, and Emil, Jr., 14, were running errands yesterday two shots were heard from the Ulrich home; the boys rushed in, finding both their mother and father dead from gunshot wounds.

Ulrich, according to Coroner F. C. Swink, killed his wife and then fired a charge from a shotgun into his own body.

Contemplated divorce action planned by Mrs. Ulrich caused her husband to commit the double tragedy, officials said.

STEUBENVILLE TO BUILD BIG STADIUM

STEUBENVILLE, O., Jan. 10.—Contract has been let for the erection of a $200,000 sports stadium here, authority for which has just been granted by the city council to a unanimous vote. Work is to begin immediately, with the hope of having the new open air auditorium completed in time for the football season of this year.

Present plans call for a seating capacity of 22,000. The stadium will be used for high school athletics but will be available for other purposes.

Negotiations are now going on between Bethany college and the city fathers.

Money for the stadium will be provided through recurring sums from the abandoned city hall.

A large, public swimming pool is one of the features included in the structure.

FIRES DRIVE MANY TO SNOWY STREETS

CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 10.—Twenty-nine persons were driven into snow-covered streets here today in two different fires; seven were carried to safety by firemen.

A number of children were implicated when fire swept two adjoining Spring Grove Avenue dwellings. George Engel, his wife and baby, half overcome by smoke, were carried from the building.

In another fire at Cheviot, near here, today, Harry Focke, his wife, and two children, Richard, 7, and Jane, 4, were carried to safety by firemen.

JUMPS TO DEATH

CINCINNATI, Jan. 10.—John Schlager, 78, retired brewmaster, was dead here today following a suicidal jump from the third story of his Knox St. home yesterday.

After telling his daughter that he was “tired of living” he jumped from the window ledge before she could prevent the act.

SILHOUETTE FIRST FUNDAMENTAL IN DRESS

This is the first of a series of articles on dress that not only tell what is the smartest thing to wear, but how to wear it. The author will write regularly and exclusively for The Gazette and Republican hereafter.

By LUCY CLAIRE
Favorite Fashion Advisor of the Smart Set.

The first fundamental in the art of fashionable dressing is silhouette.

By "silhouette" I mean outline. Draw a single line all around the edge of your hat, gown, shoes. That line represents the "silhouette."

As I go along in my fashion ar-icles I will point out how the right choice of silhouette in your apparel will add considerable beauty to your figure and your personality.

I shall only take one or two general instances today, and as time goes on, I will discuss these principles more in detail. To illustrate how important silhouette is, if you are short or stout, you simply must insist on vertical or long outside lines in your apparel because such long or vertical lines will add to your height and tend to slenderize your figure. You may see this illustrated in the model at the right.

The opposite phase of this principle is that tall figures should wear a broken silhouette—the suggestion of a waistline, a narrow hip belt, circular horizontal trimmings and other diagonal or angular lines of the same character, because this tends to shorten or divide the figure and to lessen the appearance of height. Even shoes affect the silhouette by their heels or patterns.

This principle of silhouette is not only true in gowns, hats and shoes, but it is also true in coiffures. The way you wear your hair should depend upon the shape of your face, your features and your neckline, and I shall go into more detail later advising various modes of dressing your hair according to your particular requirements.

The coiffure shown above is smart because it fits the person who wears it, by accentuating the well-chiselled facial features, the head contour and the slender tapering neckline.

"Silhouette" or outline is one of the most important essentials in being well-dressed, and I shall constantly refer to this principle as I go on in this series of fashion articles.

In a union service of the Reformed and Presbyterian Churches. The second study concerned the development of the story of Israel, Abraham and Isaac. He developed the theme "Abraham—the Father of the Faithful and Isaac the Example of Endurance and Patience."

The speaker also gave an interesting sketch of the life of each of these men phrasing it in modern terms and constantly applying the lessons from their lives to people of today. A fair-sized audience greeted the speaker on his second appearance in Xenia in this series. Next Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock the third study will be given at the Reformed Church.

AUTOS DAMAGED BUT DRIVERS UNHURT

Drivers of both cars escaped injury in a rear end collision between automobiles owned and driven by Frank Yee, Xenia, laundryman, and J. E. Newsome, colored, Wilberforce, on the Columbus Pike, two miles northeast of the city Sunday morning at 10 o'clock.

Both machines were traveling east. According to a report received at the auto club, Newsome blew his horn as a signal he was about to pass the auto ahead. Yee is reported to have pulled over to the right and then swerved slightly to the left again,

THREE LOCAL SISTERS MEET FOURTH IN REUNION

An unusual gathering was held Saturday, when four sisters, each past eighty years of age, met at the home of a niece in Dayton for the first time in eighteen years. Mrs. Matilda May of Philadelphia, 86; Mrs. Amanda Hupman, Xenia, 83; Mrs. Matilda Harner, Xenia, 83; and Mrs. Eleanor Krise, Xenia, 80, were gathered together for a surprise reunion by Mr. G. A. Harner, Columbus contractor, son of Mrs. Harner and nephew of the other three. Mrs. May and Mrs. Hupman are living with their niece at the present. Miss May Brewer, 1248 Arbor Ave., Dayton, and Mrs. Harner drove down from Columbus, Saturday, with his mother and Mrs. Krise. Mrs. Nancy Hoppling, daughter of Mrs. Harner, was present at the reunion, which, according to the aged sisters, was one of the happiest events in the last eighteen years.

All the sisters but Mrs. Harner are widows. Mr. Harner is eighty-three years old. Mrs. Krise has four children, six grandchildren and two great grandchildren. Neither Mrs. May nor Mrs. Hupman have any children. Mrs. Harner has two grandsons in Dayton and four great grandchildren. Four brothers and one sister of the family have long since passed away and the last meeting of the four remaining sisters took place in Xenia, just eighteen years ago. All four attend to their household duties, and spend their leisure time sewing or reading. All are excellent cooks, according to their relatives, enjoy automobile rides, never objecting to an occasional burst of speed.

LUTHER LEAGUE OF SPRINGFIELD HAS PROGRAM IN XENIA

Young people and other members of Luther League from Fifth Lutheran Church, Springfield, presented one of their usual inspiring devotional programs at First Lutheran church, Xenia, Sunday afternoon. The Rev. C. E. Engelhard introduced Guy Liebold, student at Hamma Divinity School, as leader for the afternoon.

The topic was "What Confession of Christ Includes." Different members of the league responded, bringing out the point that the ways of confessing Christ are many, the most outstanding being the change of heart.

In responding to a question on the topic, the Rev. Mr. Spades, Springfield, gave a short enthusiastic talk. George F. Miller also gave a brief talk, emphasizing the importance of the growth and development of a group of young people united in the work and cause of Jesus Christ.

Nearly 150 members were present. Immediately after the program, the Rev. C. E. Engelhard took charge and effected the organization of Xenia Luther League. The officers are: president, Miss Halcy Strider; vice president, Miss Mary Maxwell; secretary, Miss Margaret Bone; treasurer, Miss Helen Deacon. Under their pastor and the leadership of the officers the Lutheran League is looking forward to promoting Christian characters among the young people of Xenia.

The league at Springfield has already won a good record in its work.

SOME ESSENTIALS OF CHRISTIAN LIFE NAMED BY MINISTER

"Some essentials of Christian living, are: first, a definite experience in Christ Jesus, personalizing the Gospel salvation for each one; finding God in the heart of life, showing an example to the world of Christlike living; second, the consecration of life to service to make the work of the Kingdom paramount in the life, always putting the church and Christ's work first," declared the Rev. V. F. Brown, Trinity M. E. Church, who delivered the closing sermon of the Week of Prayer, at First M. E. Church, Sunday night. The speaker used many illustrations to clarify his point. Announcement was made of a union service of all the churches of Xenia, at Trinity M. E. Church, next Sunday evening, commemorating the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment. Lay speakers have been obtained and this service will be a laymen's meeting. Everyone interested in the enforcement measures is urged to attend. The quartet of the First U. P. Church sang two numbers, at the Week of Prayer service. Dr. W. N. Shank presided.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

WHEN BACK HURTS FLUSH YOUR KIDNEYS AS YOU CLEAN YOUR BOWELS

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, sometimes get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders. You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region begin drinking lots of water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is intended to flush clogged kidneys and help stimulate them to activity. It also helps neutralize the acids in the urine so they no longer irritate, thus helping to relieve bladder disorders. Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean. A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in trying to correct kidney trouble while it is only trouble. —Adv.

BIBLE THOUGHT

ABUNDANTLY SATISFIED.—How excellent is Thy loving kindness O God! therefore the children of men put their trust under the shadow of Thy wings. They shall be abundantly satisfied with the fatness of Thy house; and Thou shalt make them drink of the river of Thy pleasures. Psalm 36: 7, 8.

SHOULD THE DEAD RETURN?

For thousands and thousands of years, man has earnestly, prayerfully talked of the return of the dead but if, tomorrow, a popular vote of earth's combined population could settle the question, would your ballot read "Yes" or "No"?

Of course millions on millions of ballots would be cast by that merciful and tender emotion difficult to express, but called by name Mother-love.

Yes, indeed.

Millions of noble souls, replying to Isaiah, would "give beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness."

And that would be well.

But on the other side, among the No-es, millions on millions of voters would no doubt say something like this: Earth's population is figured at 2,000,000,000 human beings, now living in all parts of our little globe we call the earth. As the living give place to the dead, three times in each century, 6,000,000,000 die each 100 years. The age of man on this planet is not less than 2,000,000 years, in which time the dead would number 20,000 times 6,000,000,000, or 120,000,000,000 human beings—of a sudden now demanding their former homes and habitations.

Should the dead return, from the beginning of the world, what would happen?

Well, the practical-minded man immediately replies: All private ownership of land, bonds, stocks, houses, ships, goods of every description, would be ended instantly; also all offices, occupations, services, rewards on which society is maintained. Could sufficient clothing be supplied? The very trees in the forest would be insufficient for shelter, and there would not be room even in the overcrowded caves, on hill-sides, mountain-tops.

Like millions on millions of locusts, myriads of reincarnated celestial spirits would now of a sudden swarm down, overwhelming the living.

Practical-minded men who think like that would of course vote "No," adding with a shake of the head: "It is all a beautiful dream. Let the dead rest peacefully in their graves."

ASKING FOOLISH QUESTIONS

"Ask me no foolish questions."

You hear that, each day; but it is the man who is foolish, not the questions. And if you doubt it, you still have much to learn. Small souls are easily shaken.

The great Aristotle, wisest man of antiquity, which means of all time, certainly asked many, many foolish questions. We leave it to your common sense if, in spite of all, you still regard Aristotle as a celebrated thinker. For example, from one of his famous books, these absurd questions:

"Why does a small wedge split great weights?" "It is," he immediately answers, "because a wedge is composed of opposite levers?"

"Why, when a man rises from a chair, does he bend his legs?" To which the renowned thinker makes reply: "It is because a right angle is connected with equality and rest?"

"Why can a man throw a stone farther with a sling than with his hand?" is another question propounded by Aristotle. He then answers his own query in this fashion: "It is because when he throws with his hand he moves the stone from a rest, but when he uses a sling he throws it already in motion?"

Aristotle, merely answering one riddle by asking another, at least was thinking intently. The world has gone a long way since he died, 322 B. C., but with a school house on every tenth corner in the United States, you are equal to putting the great Aristotle "where he belongs?" Probably not one American in 100,000, or in 10,000,000 could off hand reply to Aristotle.

But let us not forget that "asking questions" improves knowledge. The questioner is the pioneer of mental progress. Don't be ashamed to say, "I do not know."

How to Achieve Beauty

DIAGNOSIS OF THE SKIN Importance Of Treating Your Skin According To Its Texture.

For the next few days, I am going to go quite thoroughly into the subject of skin texture, telling you of the various types of skins, and so that you will know whether you possess a thick, thin or normal skin, and how to give it the proper care. I think this is a most important subject because skins differ just as much as temperaments, color of hair, color of eyes or body build. In my mind, one of the greatest follies, or I might say one of the most grievous mistakes is that women simply treat their skins in a general way as though all skins were alike.

Every woman who has children of her own knows she cannot handle any two alike, their dispositions vary so that what will work with one will not have any effect on the other. You have to study their little traits, know their little sensitiveness and treat them accordingly, and so it is with skins. To be literal, I should really say that no two skins are exactly alike yet I hesitate to emphasize that fact too much for fear you will get stage fright and throw up your hands in despair, thinking the task of knowing what to do is hopeless. The preparations you put on the skin have to differ almost as much in texture as the skins themselves so you can easily see why one kind of a cream or a lotion cannot do everything for a skin, any more than one kind of a medicine can have a two fold purpose.

However, I will have to take this up day by day in my series of articles this week as there is too much to discuss in one day's talk. But there is one thing that all skins have in common and that is that their general health and beauty depend very largely on the general condition of the system and upon the health habits of the individual. It makes no difference whether your skin is thick, thin or normal, if you load yourself up with the wrong kind of food it is going to be hard for your system to take care of it properly and it is bound to crop out in your complexion.

To keep the skin healthy and attractive, it is essential that you lead a regular life, taking plenty of exercise, walking as much as possible, eating the right kind of food, watching your elimination, getting plenty of sleep and keeping your nerves relaxed as much as possible. Because if these things are not right, you cannot expect your skin to be any better.

My next subject will be "The Various Skins, How to Know Them."

MAKING MODERN MENUS

A variation in salad may be used in place of the regular vegetable with the meat course. Salads may be changed slightly and the combinations may differ so that there is no excuse for the family tiring of them.

JELLIED FRUIT SALAD
Fill individual molds with diced pineapple and quartered marshmallows. Cover with a lemon jelly mixture and let stand in a cold place until jellied. Serve on lettuce leaves with salad dressing.

BANANA SALAD
Fill small molds with lemon jelly and grapefruit sections and unmold them on a ring of ripe banana slices. Sprinkle with nuts and serve with mayonnaise.

CABBAGE SALAD
Chop one-half head of medium sized cabbage very fine and add a head of celery cut fine. Beat the yolks of two eggs in a bowl and add a teaspoon each of sugar, butter, prepared mustard, two-thirds cup of vinegar. Set the bowl in hot water and stir until it thickens. Set aside and when cold pour over cabbage and mix well.

BEEF AND POTATO SALAD
Slice equal quantities of beefs and potatoes very thinly and arrange in a salad bowl beginning with a circle of potatoes, a circle of beefs and so on. Garnish with parsley and hard-boiled eggs and pour over a salad dressing with a little more vinegar than usual.

ASPARAGUS SALAD
Two tablespoons of gelatin, one cup of cold water, two cups of mild vinegar, three slices of onion, two cloves, three cups of asparagus tips, salt. Soak gelatin in cold water five minutes, add onion and cloves to vinegar. Strain and bring to the boiling point. Strain and add soaked gelatin. When mixture begins to stiffen add asparagus tips and turn into mold. First dipped in cold water. Chill and serve on lettuce, with mayonnaise dressing to which a little catsup has been added.

It has been officially announced in railroad circles that a new Pennsylvania roundhouse is to be erected in Xenia in the near future.

Frank S. Bickett, bookkeeper at Bab's hardware store, accomplished the wonderful feat of writing the highest number of words, 6,840, on a postal card with a fountain pen and was awarded a pen by the company.

The Pennsylvania railroad inspector's office and work shop, located in the eastern part of the Xenia yards, which was destroyed by fire a couple of months ago, is being rebuilt.

"The Grasshopper" had a wreck between Port William and Bowersville last night, a freight train having jumped the track.

Many Minds SIGNIFICANT SAYINGS OF THE DAY

"Europe needs American help."

America can help most by merely continuing the lines of her present policy. If America will only be ruthless in her debt policy for the full sixty two years, Europe may be saved from another great war—at least up to 1955. So long as Great Britain has to pay 100,000 pounds sterling a day to America Great Britain will be unable to finance another war in Europe. No other nation in Europe will go to war if Great Britain cannot be depended upon to pay the expenses of both sides."—George Glasgow, foreign affairs expert of the "Manchester Guardian," premier newspaper of Great Britain.

"Nearly all of us have contemplated suicide because it beckons as an escape from reality. But most of us refrain"—Dr. F. L. Hoff, man, insurance statistician, in an interview.

"The history of industry in this country has demonstrated that a progressive shortening of the work day has not limited production. Instead, production has increased at an amazing pace. It has shown that the wage-earner instead of being injured by additional hours of leisure and recreation, has become a better citizen. The shorter work week is economically, industrially and socially safe, sound and necessary."—John P. Frey, president of Ohio State Federation of Labor.

"I believe it can be proved that 79 per cent of crime is committed by criminals out on probation or parole."—Alvin P. Fuller, governor of Massachusetts.

PENNY THOUGHTS

The business of parenthood we must agree is the greatest and best in life.

Anything that a man may do in society to justify his existence and serve his fellow man is after all subsidiary to the business of parenthood, in which his own share is so relatively small and in which the mother plays so important a part.

And if we would hope and work for the new world that we always are awaiting, let us realize first of all that the only channel through which it can come is that of new parenthood—parents with new outlooks and ideals.

The new world cannot come from new organizations, new housing, new governments—it cannot even come from new education, because, as all teachers tell us, the teachers look to the parents every time.

WIFE PRESERVERS

Instead of a cork, use a small strip of adhesive plaster on those attractive salt and pepper shakers you got for Christmas, and save yourself trouble in keeping the corks.

HOW WE LOVE TO SEE OUR NAMES

Most of us never outgrow a child-like fondness for seeing our names in print.

I suppose the reason is that we are constantly seeking relief from overwhelming wildness, daily forced upon us, that we don't amount to much.

If you live in a large city and pause to watch thousands of people hurrying to catch cars at the rush hour, your own part in the world's activities seems insignificant. Millions of folks and you only one of them! You feel equally unimportant if you look at the ocean or at the stars. The world moves along much the same whether you attend all the committee meetings or not. But if you pick up your favorite newspaper and see your name, Elmer E. Fish, printed right out in bold type as among those who helped make the clam bake or the rummage sale a success, you say to yourself:

"Ah ha-a, the well-known name! Not so obscure after all."

Because of this, every good newspaper editor knows the wisdom of printing lots of names—full lists of committees, those in the receiving line, names of all who helped pour tea at a reception.

The average man is almost as

SOPHIE IRENE LOEB Says

FABLES OF EVERYDAY FOLKS

Her Family Tree

Once upon a time there was a woman who was born with ancestors. From the date of her birth she never forgot them.

She remembered her old gray grandmother who had hovered over her cradle and whose lavender and white lace, though full of holes, was now hers. She remembered the grandfather's clock that had been in the family for a thousand years.

She remembered that her father's uncle, by marriage, had led her illustrious great-grandfather had come across in the Mayflower.

Not only did this woman remember all these great people from whom she traced a direct lineage, but she never missed an opportunity to tell about it.

In fact, it was in the very marrow of her bones—so much so that all who had no family tree to display were like many weeds to her.

She was a member of every club that purported to be of historic fame, until she was almost poor from paying dues to them. She attended all their meetings, which were mainly filled with addresses on things that happened in "those good old days."

One time this woman was placed on a committee to "investigate" the working girls of a congested city. She went to social centers and meetings of factory girls, where they were studying and discussing the most vital issues of the day.

She was astonished and horrified. She called them "brazen" and "vulgar," and condescended to continue her search only because she wished to show up the comparison of her upbringing with that of the girls of today.

One evening when she was full of indignation while at a meeting of young women who were bitterly arraignment a system of long hours of labor which they could no longer tolerate, she burst forth and told them that girls in her day were at home with their mothers and let men do all the fighting for reforms.

She attacked the modern girl's sense of "modesty" and told them if they had stayed at home and did housework they would be much better off. She concluded her attack with a proud announcement of her long line of ancestors.

Whereupon a tired looking girl who had gleaned her education in night schools and in burning the midnight oil answered for all.

"What have you ever done for yourself? Today when I closed up my day's work I had sewed up twenty-five dozen shirt sleeves. That money goes to the support of my parents."

"My father and mother can't remember their great-grandmother's name, but they brought me up so I would not be dependent on the money they would never leave. I have no dead ancestors to lean upon. But I have strong hands and my feet know how to run a sewing machine."

"We have no old family silver, but what we have is our ten-cent plate is bought and paid for with my earnings. I would hate to be a parasite that hangs on the limb of an old family tree and gets its sustenance from what remains in its hollow trunk."

"If you wish to help us, bear with us and meet our problems; but do not preach to us about departed ones whose condition was not of the twentieth century. Such as you are a hindrance rather than a help."

The chorus echoed: "Amen, so say we all of us." And the report of this meeting went forth. The woman was made to see herself as she really was, a relic of the past, who could not see the present except to censure it. She learned this moral:

People who cannot plant productive seeds should not prate as you are a hindrance rather than dead family trees.

pleased to see his name in print as he is to find the mention of his name in one of the chapters was not displeasing."

I once took mean advantage of people's love for seeing their own names and played a practical joke on some twosome of book reviewers and other friends. It was such a low, reprehensible trick that I have never ceased to be ashamed of myself.

I had just had published a book, and when it was sent to reviewers, and others whom I desired to read it, I wrote each one a letter saying: "I trust that the mention of your name in one of the chapters was not displeasing."

The result was that each reviewer neglected far more important volumes to read mine, hoping to encounter his own name. Many of them failing to find their name wrote me for more specific information.

I fear that I must have a hopeless streak of depravity in me, I should never have played so disgraceful and unfair a prank.

I sat down the other afternoon to breakfast, with a good appetite and a sneer, to skim through the book. It wasn't my lucky day. I had a spoonful of cereal half way to my rosy lips when my glass encountered the following:

"Slack as an oyster in a bottle of castor oil—Anon."

It's like Anon to write a thing like that and very much like Brother Wiltast to embalm it in ink.

The Duchess to whom I read the above paragraph said: "Why criticize Anon and his admirer when you, yourself, are rehearsing the objectionable line. Suppose some sensitive soul read your column at THEIR breakfast? That never occurred to you did it?"

I've always maintained that the Fairest of Her Sex would be a second Queen Marie if she hadn't been born with a hollow where her bump of humor should protrude.

Frank Wiltast, who earns his artichokes and coffee by compiling things other men write, has just brought forth a new volume called "Smiles of 1926."

For the most part they're as stupid as could be expected, if more so. He didn't include the one I sandpapered, about being "fair and square as a Sweden head," and naturally I'm a trifle peeved.

There's nothing to it. For years the book publishers have been printing pictures of authors in their Sunday ads, and the public keeps right on buying.

In the old days in New York it was regarded as a pleasure when the United States senator in the white jacket, on the other side of the bar, used to remark: "Well, gentlemen, name your poison!"

And while on that subject: What's become of the list of poison antidotes that one time loomed large in the compendium of useful information at the back plaza of every well regulated diary? Now, if ever, the sad-eyed diarist should know "What to Do Till the Doctor Arrives."

Frank Wiltast, who earns his artichokes and coffee by compiling things other men write, has just

WHAT IS BILE? Bile is the secretion or juice of the cells of the great gland called the liver. The ducts, or vessels, into which it is discharged, ever grow larger and larger, finally forming one main stream, like a river and its tributaries, which empties into the duodenum, the initial portion of the small intestine.

Its outflow is most abundant when the duodenum receives the partially digested food from the stomach, a portion of it being switched off from time to time, to the little sac or reservoir called the gall-bladder. I suppose this may act as a reserve in case a reserve is necessary, but it is not essential for the gall bladder may be thrown out of commission by disease or removed entirely by the surgeon.

Bile may be yellow, green or light brown and can be seen through the translucent wall of the intestine as it flows into that organ when the abdomen is opened for surgical purpose.

It is a complex substance containing cholesterol, bile salts, etc. It is a digestive secretion, but not a ferment like the secretions of the stomach and pancreas.

It is produced at the rate of several pint daily and makes up in quantity for what it lacks in strength.

It permeates and dilutes the food, especially the fats and undergoes several chemical changes.

Most of it has accomplished its object before it reaches the end of its travels in the thirty feet of intestine, and has been reabsorbed into the blood in another form, reaching its way back again to the liver to be redeposited as liver sugar or glycogen and then reconverted into bile.

Sometimes an obstruction in the bile ducts prevents egress of the bile, in which case some of it is taken up by the blood vessels of the liver, carried by the blood over the body and some of its constituents deposited in the skin, the muscles and the conjunctiva of the eyes, producing jaundice.

It may also be discharged as a greenish fluid with the intestinal evacuations.

In peritonitis it may be forced back from the intestine into the stomach and cause vomiting. This is always a symptom which excites alarm. If the gall-bladder becomes infected, the bile it contains comes thickened and gall stones are formed.

There may be only two or three large ones or there may be hundreds of small ones. They produce agonizing pain as they try to get into the intestine and may cause death unless removed by the surgeon.

The liver or gall-bladder may be the seat of cancer, or of huge abscesses, and it may be attacked by hookworm or other parasites.

One must lead a simple and regulated life to keep the liver working properly and keep off these terrible diseases.

One of the best ways to bring on serious disease of the liver is to drink an abundance of almost any kind of alcoholic liquor.

Drunkard's liver or cirrhosis is sure to come if you only drink enough alcohol and for a sufficient time.

Many of the diseases which affect the flow and action of the bile are curable if they are taken in season and properly treated, but others are incurable from the start and probably will always be.

Life may not continue when the liver refuses to do its work, for it is one of the organs the body cannot possibly dispense with.

FUN FOR THE WHOLE FAMILY

Just AMONG US GIRLS

by Kathryn Kenney

"THE WOULD-BE VAMPIRE"

Some women are born silly and others have husbands who make them that way. Twittering should be reserved for the birds, most of whom are "hen-peckers."

The type of woman who hangs on a man's neck always hangs her self.

Deliver us from the woman who thinks she is a vampire, and deliver her poison.

Many a False Alarm calls out the whole works. This sort of woman should be given a man who doesn't mind being a gift. She'll tie him up fast enough!

Most baby dolls say "papa" in-quietly as the New Year and laughing as though she had just laid an egg. Her eyes are rolling like a heavy sea and God help the sailors on a night like this!

It isn't so much the face that has to be taken with a grain of salt; it's the way she has of asking a man if he loves her when he doesn't even like her! She is the sort of woman who screams when she sees a man and has hysterics when she doesn't. She can't live without 'em but she doesn't have to as far as they're concerned!

She is always saying "You go on" to the boy friends and then letting them try to do it! Mother

stead of "mama."

These vampish women have so many waste motions that they should be put to flagging trains!

There is the type of woman who thinks that earrings make the vamp, forgetting that every whistle is not a siren.

You have to do more than dress the part; there's many a little Lord Fauntleroy in an Indian suit.

Many a woman who tells you that she is an old maid from choice forgets to mention that it's the man's choice. If she doesn't want a man why doesn't she cancel her order?

The vamp comes in the door as has told her that she has "a way with the men," a long way home, probably!

The big mystery is how she sometimes lands one, when there isn't any land in sight.

Of course if a woman thinks she's irresistible she's certain to sell somebody on the idea even if they take off a fifty per cent discount. If she sells 'em she had better clinch the bargain and the neck at the same time.

Vampires are born and not made; more things have been cooked up in a gingham apron than in a beaded gown. The woman who knows her stuff doesn't have to introduce it to anyone else!

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Jan. 10.—If you desire to ascertain who's who in Hollywood by a perusal of the 1927 edition of Who's Who in America, you are very apt to learn who "ain't."

For a review of this latest compilation of those who "have achieved special prominence in creditable lines of effort, making them the subjects of extensive interest, inquiry or discussion," shows that but twenty-two Hollywoodites—seventeen men and five women—are included.

One cannot help but wonder, after reviewing those who are in the book, the exact nature of the "extensive interest, inquiry or discussion" that brought them the coveted honor, to the exclusion of so many of their brethren.

One will search in vain for Theda Bara's name and if she didn't create "interest, inquiry and discussion" with her introduction of vampire roles and the introduction of the word "vamp" in the English language, who did?

Neither will one find Betty Blythe, didn't her undraped form in "The Queen of Sheba" arouse discussion, plaudits and criticism?

HONEY LOU by Beatrice Burton author of "LOVE BOUNDS" and "HER MAN" ETC.

JOHNSON FEATURES INC. 1926

READ THIS FIRST:

HONEY LOU HUNTLEY is private secretary to a "GRUMPY" WALLACK, head of the Wallack Film Mills. Honey Lou likes everyone at the mills except JOE MEADOWS, the shipping clerk, who makes love to her against her will.

JACK WALLACK, who comes to his father's mills to learn the business, falls in love with Honey Lou the minute he sees her. Brought up by an old-fashioned mother, Honey Lou is a mixture of flapper and clinging vine.

ANGELA ALLEN pretends to be a friend of Honey Lou and tells her not to take Jack seriously. Jack is very jealous of DR. STEVE MAYHEW, a friend of MARGRET, Honey Lou's sister.

Honey Lou's engagement to Jack is announced and plans are made for the wedding.

Jack and Honey Lou have a quiet home wedding and spend their honeymoon camping at Lake Tama.

Honey Lou stops at the Wallack Mills office to see Ann Ludlow. Ann tells Honey Lou why she sent for her. Honey Lou sees Joe Meadows and tells him he must marry Ann at once and he agrees to do so.

Honey Lou and Jack settle down in their own flat with Mary Deane, the cook.

Angela tells Honey Lou she is going to have a party for her and Jack Saturday night. Honey Lou goes home and finds Jack reading poems about little houses in the country filled with love and happiness. Honey Lou decides to let Mary go in the morning, do her own work, and try to make the kind of home Jack wants.

Tim Donegal tells of the card games he and Honey Lou have together and Jack forbids Honey Lou to have Tim Donegal in their house.

Honey Lou, angered by Jack's objections to Donegal, leaves the flat for her mother's home. Margaret tells her she has no reason to be jealous of Jane Ayres, Jack's secretary, but to watch Angela. Honey Lou returns to the flat, a quarrel follows.

Honey Lou moves into the guest room and further complicates her domestic affairs by her "allent treatment" of Jack.

Honey Lou, on a motor ride with Angela and Donegal, decides to follow Jack's wishes in regard to Donegal.

Donegal's arrest delays Honey Lou's and Angela's return until two in the morning.

The published news of Donegal's arrest in connection with the names of Angela and Honey Lou, together with Angela's duplicity, finally culminates in the separation of Jack and Honey Lou.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER LX.

Honey Lou looked Miss Ayres over from the top of her head with its old-fashioned coil of hair to the soles of her sensible shoes.

"Well!" she exclaimed, turning to Margaret, "I'll say this for her—she looks as if dumb enough to think that a plumber sells plums, doesn't she?"

Margaret merely raised her eyebrows and remarked that Miss Ayres was a good worker.

"But look at her! Can you feature Jack Wallack getting a case on a girl like that?" Honey Lou almost wailed the words. "Why, she's a regular piano box of a woman!"

She couldn't imagine Jack, with his masculine passion for beauty in the woman he loved, taking a second look at Jane Ayres. Still, you never could tell about men. Sometimes they fell for the plainest women, just because they wanted someone to "mother" them and look after them. Funny, wasn't it?

"Maybe if I'd mothered Jack a little more and darned his socks, I'd kept him longer," she said to herself. "But I didn't have sense enough to—and there's no use crying over spilled milk now."

As she walked along through the brilliant cold November sunshine, she wondered just how she would re-make her life, now that she was leaving Jack. She had told him that after today she would never so much as look at him again. She must start to make her plans for the future.

But she could think no farther ahead than that very afternoon, when she would see him again, at Daisy's wedding in St. Michael's church.

St. Michael's church was packed for the wedding that afternoon.

At half past four Honey Lou waited in the vestry for Daisy to come.

With her were the bridesmaids.

They made her think of "Mary, Mary, quite contrary," and her garden. A cluster of girls that were like flowers, perfumed and delicately colored in their pink dresses.

Angela wasn't so pretty as usual today. Pink wasn't so becoming to her as white, for one thing. And for another she looked haggard and there were violet marks under her eyes. She did not look at Honey Lou or speak to her.

At twenty-five minutes to five Daisy came dashing into the church, breathless and late as usual.

"Oh, dear!" she cried, stepping on her long train and her veil. "I'll bet I'll never get married again—it's so much trouble! And I'm so tired—"

She was halfway between tears and laughter, and under the scallops of her yellow hair her little face was drawn and wild-looking.

"Thank heaven, I can cover my mug!" she said fervently to Honey Lou, pulling down her short face veil. "I didn't sleep a wink last night. I was that nervous! And I bet I look as old as Mrs. Methusalem."

The slow march began. Honey Lou saw heads being turned her way as she swept serenely along.

One person she recognized in all that well-dressed, quiet crowd—Jack's mother, The Head, in the purple velvet dress she had worn to Honey Lou's own wedding the year before.

With her head held high, Honey Lou sailed past her down the aisle. "I suppose," she thought, with the bitterness that was so rare with her, "I suppose she thought all of Jack's friends would drop the minute we split up. Well, she had another thing coming!"

Then Jack's own face swam before her eyes. The wedding procession had reached the front of the church, and there he stood, just behind Sam Langdon.

Honey Lou could feel his eyes on her every movement as she swept up to the altar and stopped beside the nervous, shaking little bride.

Above them the great music of the wedding march rose, beating the higher and higher like wings—and then like wings, it dropped to throbbing stillness.

Music had always stirred Honey Lou to the bottom of her soul, and she was suddenly dreadfully afraid that she was going to cry. She bent her head, and the big white hat shadowed her face and hid it.

No one saw her put up one gloved finger to her wet eyes, except one person. And he scowled and stared stonily ahead of him as if he had not seen.

They walked out of the church the Vitaphone Co. in 1900 which was the first company to make screen photoplays. It seems a bit incongruous, but Smith's name cannot be found in the book.

Charles Chaplin, of course, is given twenty-one lines. Jackie Coogan is the only Coogan in the book.

Underneath Cecil De Mille's name appears the name of William C. De Mille.

Douglas Fairbanks receives nineteen lines. Like Harold Lloyd he was born in Denver.

It took some time to find the name of Mary Pickford. It was found, however, and revealed the interesting, if true, information that Fairbanks is a resident of Los Angeles while Miss Pickford resided in Beverly Hills. Another Hollywood scandal.

The late Thomas H. Ince is given credit for discovering Sessue Hayakawa, the Japanese actor, who happens to be in Los Angeles at the present time. William S. Hart was the one-time leading man for Modjeska, Madame Rhea and Julia Arthur. He has been in pictures since 1914.

Mary Miles Minter, who eschewed motion pictures considerably over a year ago, has a very long notice. Clara Kimball Young and Pauline Frederick are dismissed with a few lines.

One will find a notice of Norma Talmadge with the fact that she is the wife of Joseph M. Schenck. But one will search in vain for any data of Mr. Schenck. Also notice of Constance and Natalie Talmadge, but their husbands are omitted.

Did anyone know that Milton Sills was a frequent speaker on "art, literature and religion?"

Page 1926 reveals that the real name of the late Rudolph Valentino was Rudolph Alfonso Rafael Pierre Filibert Guglielmi Di Valentina d'Antongollosa.

And speaking of names Gloria Swanson was not born Swanson, but Klanowsky.

Others who are mentioned are: Orla Harlan, Douglas McLean, Tom Mix, Charles Ray, Robert Edeson, Frank Keenan, Rupert Hughes, Tully Marshall, Jim Tully, Frances Marion, Byron Morgan, Frank H. Spearman, H. C. Witwer, Peter B. Kyne, Rob Wagner, Luis Weber, and Clara Kimball Young. Col. William N. Selig has a prominent place also. His middle name is revealed as being "Nichols."

Will Rogers is the last on the list of Beverly Hills residents.

FINDS THE EARTH IS LIGHTER

DR. PAUL HEYL OPERATING ONE OF THE DEVICES USED IN WEIGHING THE EARTH

By J. HERBERT DUCKWORTH

Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright, 1926

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—The earth is not as heavy as it was thought to be, Dr. Paul R. Heyl, of the bureau of standards, who, in a deep subterranean laboratory in Washington, has for the past three years been engaged in the task of weighing it, has discovered.

Dr. Heyl found that instead of tipping the scales at 6,660,000,000,000,000,000 tons, the long accepted figure, the weight is 6,653,000,000,000,000,000 tons.

Important? Yes. For one thing, the mass of the earth is the starting point from which astronomers obtain the mass of the moon and the sun, and of the other planets of the solar system.

Then it is from a knowledge of the earth's mass that its density, that is, the number of times it is heavier than an equal globe of water, is calculated. It is because the density is something between four and six times that of water that the inference is drawn that the core of the earth must be composed of something much heavier than the outer crust—probably steel.

It is the business of the bureau of standards to determine such fundamental reference quantities as this as accurately as possible.

How is the earth weighed? Like many other scientific measurements, this operation is carried out by a roundabout process.

Dr. Heyl set up a miniature system representing the earth and a body near its surface. This was composed of heavy steel cylinders and small platinum balls suspended on a fine filament of tungsten, everything previously weighed to the millionth of a grain.

The force of attraction between these bodies was determined. This depended on their masses, greater bodies attracting each other more strongly than smaller ones, and on the distances of their centers, bodies attracting more strongly the closer they are together.

In the actual case of the earth and a body on its surface, all but one of the quantities involved can be measured. The small body can be weighed, and thus the force with which the earth attracts it determined. By the same operation the mass of the small body can be measured. The distance from its center to the center of the earth can be calculated. The mass of the earth is the unknown quantity.

It was by applying the results of the miniature experiment, in which every quantity was known, and solving a problem in proportion, that Dr. Heyl got his latest figure on our globe's avoirdupois.

So delicate is the apparatus used in this experiment that, although it is set up in a room thirty-five feet underground, the attraction of an automobile in the grounds above will be measured. The presence of a person within ten feet of it will alter its time of swing because of the attraction of the person's body for the platinum balls.

No work of this kind has been done for a generation, and it was thought that sufficient progress in the technique of laboratory practice had been made in that time to warrant the attempt to obtain another figure.

The figure obtained may be slightly modified as additional results are worked out.

Rheumatism can't be rubbed away

Are you one of those unfortunate who suffer with pains in your muscles and joints, making you miserable, less efficient, interfering with your working hours, ruining your sleep?

You may have tried many things without relief. Why not try S.S.S.? For more than 100 years it has been giving relief in thousands of cases, as testified to in unsolicited letters of gratitude.

"I suffered from rheumatism for a good many years. At times my joints would swell so, I couldn't walk. I tried most everything. Went to Hot Springs and finally I decided to try S.S.S. I took a course in a short time the rheumatic pains entirely left me. I also had a breakthrough on my hands for years that nothing would heal, but now this has disappeared, and I am sure that it was S.S.S. which removed the cause. I am now in perfect health, and want to add that I have tried all kinds of medicines but I think S.S.S. is the best." Carl C. Campbell, 115 West Main Street, Johnson City, Tenn.

S.S.S. is purely vegetable. It is extracted from the fresh roots of medicinal plants and herbs and gives to Nature what she needs in building you up so that your system throws off the cause.

S.S.S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.
